15 Afghan soldiers killed in Taliban explosion in Nangarhar

Source:

A Taliban tank bombing on a military base in Shirzad district of Nangarhar province killed 15 soldiers and wounded four others, security sources confirmed. Sources say the attack was carried out using a military Humvee tank, and that Afghan forces prevented a second bombing, a truck bomb, from being detonated. The explosion was carried out on Saturday morning in the Gandumak area of Shirzad district. According to sources, 15 public protection unit soldiers from the defense ministry were killed and four others were injured in the attack. The Nangarhar governor's media and information office confirmed the attack but said eight public order soldiers lost their lives. Officials also said that security forces seized a Mazda truck full of explosives.

Opinion: Why Joe Biden needs to revise the US-Taliban deal

President Joe Biden plans to review the US-Taliban deal, which was signed by his predecessor, Donald Trump. It is a wise decision, as the agreement gives an unfair advantage to the militant group, says DW's Shamil Shams. No deal is better than a bad deal, and the US-Taliban accord signed by the former US President Donald Trump is definitely a bad one. The agreement was done in haste because the US desperately wants to end the 19-year-long war. But the deal in its present form can do more harm to the US and Afghanistan than good. The new US president Joe Biden's indication that his administration is willing to revisit the Doha deal is a welcome move. We are, however, unsure what kind of review the Biden administration plans.
